“Haynesville” LAUNCHES WEB SITE (www.HaynesvilleMovie.com) AND MOVIE TRAILER

(SHREVEPORT, LA) The “Haynesville” production team, Three Penny Productions and Creative State Design celebrated the official launch of the film’s Web site today. The site will help fans stay informed about the film, its subjects and about energy issues.

“I really want this site to be a place where people can stay in touch with ‘Haynesville,’ but most importantly, I want the site to be a place where everyone can keep up on the important energy issues in the film and the film’s subjects,” said Gregory Kallenberg, “Haynesville” director and one of its producers.

The launching of the film’s site will also feature the debut of the “Haynesville” movie trailer.

“This is a film about three lives caught in the middle of the largest natural gas discovery in the U.S. and maybe the world,” said Kallenberg. “I think Chris Lyon, the editor, did an excellent job getting this big story and its elements into the trailer.”

The site features a filmmaker blog, a view into the “Haynesville” Twitter feed (@HaynesvilleFilm) and news and views on national and international energy issues.

“We want HaynesvilleMovie.com to be a gathering place for people who want to support the film. We are a small, independently produced documentary with big aspirations,” said Mark Bullard, the film’s producer. “We plan for this site to be the beginning of a grassroots effort that will take us to the highest heights of the documentary world.”

ABOUT “HAYNESVILLE”: “Haynesville” is a documentary following the discovery of the United States’ largest natural gas field; a field named the “Haynesville Shale.” The film focuses on three people’s lives caught in the middle of the find and explores the Haynesville’s impact on their lives. The film also looks at this massive field from a national perspective, exploring the implications and huge potential of finding enough natural gas to run the U.S. for decades.
